

Building tomorrow's minds : On the shoulders of teaching giants in the bush capital

Sarah Nathan-Truesdale is an exceptional and innovative teacher with impressive community connections, which she regularly draws upon to enrich her practice. Sarah consistently approaches her practice from a solutions-focussed lens and looks for opportunities to support her learners' growth. Sarah's strengths are in both wellbeing and academic areas, which allows Sarah to engage with her learners in a holistic manner.

Sarah has created memorable teaching moments for both her learners and her colleagues by creating dynamic and detailed materials to support our Future Focused Learning model. As a foundation year teacher in a brand new high school, she has been instrumental in developing supports and resources which support our contemporary learning model. For example, she has had a strong focus on making Bloom's Taxonomy accessible to high school learners and embedded into practice for young people and teachers alike.

Sarah is constantly seeking members of the community to come in and share their expertise to provide rich and engaging learning opportunities with real-world focus.

Sarah is highly regarded by her colleagues, learners and families due to her compassion, professionalism and flexibility. All members of the Evelyn Scott School community value the diversity of skills that Sarah brings, including her cross-curricular expertise and her experiences and cultural understandings gained from her time teaching in remote Aboriginal communities across Australia.

Sarah's position as a member of our Senior Campus Foundation teaching team is notable and memorable as a key component of our school's positive workplace culture.
